

New telephone system at Flux

Asnaes, Denmark March 2009

Flux has just finished the installation of a new telephone system. This is the latest addition of a range of several improvements at the head quarter in Denmark. The telephone system is convertible with EDP (electronic data processing) to secure the future user demands both for customers and for Flux.

It means that our customers now have direct access to their daily contact at Flux. It will also be possible to leave a message directly at the voicemail of the contact person in case the person is not available at the time of the call.

Direct numbers in sales are:
